

ALIEN BABIES

you

Congratulations on your brand new Alien Baby, but before you learn to love it as much as your own child, you may want to learn a bit about your new baby. It's name is [REDACTED] and is from the planet [REDACTED]

Unidentified flying object (commonly abbreviated as [REDACTED]) is the popular term for any aerial phenomenon whose cause cannot be easily or immediately determined. Both military and civilian research show that a significant majority of [REDACTED] sightings are identified after further investigation, either explicitly or indirectly through the presence of clear and simple explanatory factors (see Occam's Razor). The United States Air Force, who coined the term in 1952, initially defined [REDACTED]s as those objects that remain unidentified after scrutiny by expert investigators, though the term [REDACTED] is often used more generally to describe any sighting unidentifiable to the reporting observer(s). Popular culture frequently takes the term [REDACTED] as a synonym for alien spacecraft. Some investigators now prefer to use the broader term Unidentified Aerial Phenomenon (or UAP), to avoid the confusion and speculative associations that have become attached to [REDACTED].
